LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

A Thimble Party.
Mrs. D. H. Conklin gave a thimble party yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at her elegant home on Prairie Avenue. Each guest brought her sewing and fancy work and was presented with a thimble by her most hospitable hostess. Those present included Mesdames E. C. Roberts, J. M. Oakey, F. M. Young, Mrs. Briggs, of Bloomington, Mrs. S. B. Lines, of St. Louis; Mesdames W. M. Harsh, D. O. Reynolds, N. S. Bohon, Peter Loeb, W. B. Hostetter, O. H. Gort, W. C. Armstrong, James Miller, G. C. Fineman, F. S. Harsh, James Mullins, D. H. Moore, J. N. Warren, J. W. Race, Louise Ackerson, of San Francisco, Wm. Voorhes, W. E. Nelson, A. L. Lytle, B. K. Duffee, V. H. Patke, M. M. Goodwin, K. L. Walston, W. H. Pennington, W. B. Chambers, J. R. Race, L. Burrows, W. J. Quintan, J. N. Randall, D. S. Schellenger, F. P. Bosch, Andrew Stevens, A. T. Summers, and Misses Alice Roberts, Mattie Gort, Mollie Barnes, and Miss Hamilton, of Toledo, Ohio.

Antipyrine.
"I wish my name was Knorr just now," said a druggist. "There is a man of that name who is making a fortune of the largest dimensions just at present, and doing it fast too. I mean Dr. Knorr, of the town of Hoechst on the Main in Germany. He is the man who owns the secret of antipyrine, which is the latest of physicians and is declared by them to be the best antipyretic ever brought out. Nobody knows just what it is, though all suspect there is a good deal of quinine in it and that the inventor has found some process of dissolving quinine and giving it greater efficacy."
"During the epidemic of influenza the rush for this drug has been enormous; and the druggists can't sell it cheaper than the wholesale dealers are at under contract to Dr. Knorr to sell it at $1.40 an ounce, neither more nor less. The doctor will be immensely rich after the epidemic is over."

The New Discovery.
You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have not used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, lung or chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free, at Dr. A. J. Stoner's drug store.

GRN. JIM WEAVER, of Iowa, Oklahoma, or any where else where there's hope of an office, has turned up in a row role. Weaver we believe was a Whig, a Free Soiler, a Republican, a Democrat, a Greenbacker, a Union Labor man, and back again to Democracy. The other day he bobbed up in Des Moines before the Prohibition State Convention, and announced that he is now a Prohibitionist. It is due to the gentleman to state that through all his many political changes no one has accused him of not being a strong and unswerving Weaver man.

BUCKION'S AFRICA DRUG.

The New "Finger" Prayer Book.
Henry Frowde, of Oxford university, has designed a series of prayer books, the novelty and merit of which consist alike in their diminutive size and the beauty of their binding. It is difficult to believe that a book of nearly 700 pages will go into the waistcoat pocket or into the purse, but such is the delicacy of the workmanship and the compactness of the binding that no difficulty will be found in such a method of carriage. The tiny volume, bound in morocco and velvet, which Mr. Frowde has called the "Finger" prayer book, weighs about three-quarters of an ounce, is only one inch in breadth, three and a half inches in length and one-third of an inch in thickness. To get 670 pages and two morocco covers into the thickness of one-third of an inch is a marvel of paper making and binding. One specimen is contrived to hang on the chate-laine; a case is made of silver, consisting of a double cross, one for each of the velvet covers of the book, and this both adds to the beauty of the volume and serves to keep it in a compact form. A ring is added, which serves for attachment to a chain. An edition is also issued without the calendar and the occasional services, thus reducing the thickness by one-third and the weight to about half an ounce.—London Times.

PARISIAN MEAT MARKETS.

Some of the Tricks of the Merchants—How Their Prices Vary.

Though it may seem an easy job to drop into half a dozen shops and by a few smart questions ascertain the price of provisions in Paris, the task, however, is not quite so easy as at first sight appears. In the price of meat, for instance, there is no standard apparent. If you ask the price of a leg of mutton in the Saint Honoré quarter, the butcher will let you have the joint at about twenty-four cents a pound. In the Champ Elysees quarter I have been asked, for a fashionable butcher's, for a similar joint, thirty cents under, under pretext that it was pro-salt—lamb fed on salt marshes, or Southdown, which is mere humbug. I have dined in the evening with a French family in the Montmartre quarter, and on admiring the toothsome of the gigot—which the French roast to perfection—I have been informed it there cost eighteen cents a pound! Now mark that these three precisely similar joints were each brought in a butcher's shop, and not far apart, for in a market where competition often lowers the price. Yet even in these three cases I found a difference of about 100 per cent.

These fashionable dealers lay out their meat in the most tempting manner on white marble slabs. It is cut into the most enticing portions, and displayed in such a clean and delicate way as to render the sight of it a pleasing object. The shops in which these ruby colored, dainty bits are sold are, for the most part, lined with white tiles, which give them a very clean appearance. The outside is highly gilt, with red railings, and the favorite joints, such as the legs of mutton, are hung up in rows, enveloped, like bouquets, in cut paper, and decorated with green bay leaves and pink paper roses. Artificial flowers are strewn amongst joints and shoulders of mutton; and cutlets, divested of gross fat, lie ready to be dressed, while every other object likely to hide and overcome the unsightliness of the trade is cunningly parcelled to invite custom. I have even seen a small calf, opened and thoroughly cleansed, hung up in a most becoming manner, while a veil of apparently fine lace, entirely made, or rather cut, out of a certain portion of its inside, has been gracefully thrown over the carcass.

The meat eaten in Paris is divided into two parts—that brought as livestock, slaughtered and cut up in the Paris abattoirs, or slaughter houses, and that cut up in the provinces, the coarse pieces of which are eaten on the spot, and the best forwarded by express train to the Italies, or Central markets, and from there sent to the butchers' shops.

The character, or pork butcher, follows a trade almost unknown to us. At his shop every object of pig meat, potted meat and other appetizing articles for breakfast and lunch may be purchased, as well as turtles, capons, and even partridges stuffed with truffles, at certain seasons of the year. You can here buy a single slice of ham or a sausage, cooked or uncooked. You may purchase a first rate pate de Strasbourg for $5, or obtain a slice of it for twenty cents. Truffles, olives, sardines, tongues and cotelettes of every description, pigs' feet, bread crumbed and truffled, lie ready for immediate cooking; cold roast pork, sausage made of wild boar, and a hundred other luxuries tempt you, and always stand enticingly to whet your appetite.

The average market price of pork last year was sixteen cents a pound. As for the meat, this is, of course, the wholesale price current by auction at the central markets.

Fish, though it may appear extraordinary, can be found even fresher here than in London. Since the establishment of railways all the French fishing towns have apparently agreed to send up some nine-tenths of their take to the French metropolis. Add to this an almost incredible supply daily received from England and Belgium, as well as the produce of the French rivers, and the ample quantities of this delicacy may, to a certain extent, be accounted for.—Paris Letter in New York Star.

The Care of Fine Books.

A representative of The American Analyst called upon a well known bibliophile of New York city for information respecting the care of fine books. A book, said the expert, is a delicate organization, whose foes are perpetually endeavoring to destroy it, and its foes are simply legion. Water, moisture or dampness, on the one hand, and excessive dryness on the other, are both extremely injurious. A high temperature dries paper, parchment and leather, and renders them very brittle. In the opposite direction, great cold affects books in the same manner, but to a much smaller extent. For this reason a Swede or a Canadian has a harder time with his library than a Frenchman, an Englishman or an American.

But the hardest time of all is experienced by the residents of hot climates like southern India, Egypt, Brazil and Colombia. Another dangerous enemy to all books is what is usually termed mold. This is not a simple vegetable growth, as is popularly believed. Microscopists have discovered over 100 species of mold with which libraries are afflicted. Some attack paper; others parchment; some fasten on sheepskin, while others prefer morocco for a diet. There is hardly a substance of any sort used in bookbinding but what has anywhere or here and there a mold which will find its way into a home or a source of nourishment. Insects are a cause of endless trouble. Flies and spiders merely soil books; moths and butterflies lay eggs which hatch into voracious and destructive larvae. These do any amount of damage.

You Cannot Be Too Specific.

Consumption.

Ballard's Horehound Syrup.
No single disease has played such sad havoc with the human race as Consumption. No other disease approaches so steadily. In early symptoms are noted because it is thought only a Cold or hacking Cough, which is neglected until the grim monster has such a hold that nothing but death can relieve it. Ballard's Horehound Syrup has removed the grip of this grim monster from many a throat. It is a true cure, it will effect a permanent cure, and in the worst cases it will give surprising relief. Try it, and you will not put it off until too late. Sold by John A. Swearingen, Druggist.

A Peculiar Privilege.

It appears that only two persons enjoy the privilege of driving to the Vatican with a new horse vehicle. One of them is the commissary general of the holy inquisition and the other the Prussian ambassador accredited to the Holy See. The latter's privilege owes its origin to rather an interesting circumstance. A Prussian ambassador some years ago drove up one day in a single horse carriage and presented himself for admission at the gates of the Vatican leading into the court yard; but, in pursuance of their orders, he was refused admission, except on foot, by the Swiss guard. Being forced to yield, he complained with some bitterness to Cardinal Antonelli, secretary of state to Pius IX, who said he would refer the matter to his holiness. Pius IX, upon hearing of the incident, immediately gave orders that henceforth his excellency, the Prussian ambassador, was to be allowed admittance cum quocumque quadrupede.—Chicago Times.

OREGON'S WHITE WOLF.

DESCRIPTION OF A BATTLE BETWEEN WOLVES AND ELKS.

Several Ranchers of Southern Oregon Start Out on a Hunt After the Marauders of Their Sheep Flocks and Meet With an Exciting Adventure.

The owners of the large sheep ranches in the vicinity of Linkville, Ore., have been much annoyed by the depredations committed by the white wolf in their herds that a grand hunt for these daring marauders was organized. The white wolf of southern Oregon is the fiercest animal—not even excepting the bear—to be found in the country, and is a formidable looking beast, often attaining five feet in length and nearly as large as a yearling calf. His strength and ferocity are remarkable, and his courage undaunted.

Knowing him to be a rather tough customer to tackle at close quarters, the hunting party, which consisted of half a dozen of the neighboring stock owners and a correspondent of The Independent, went thoroughly armed against him with hunting knives, revolvers and rifles. The cunning of the animal in evading pursuit is incredible, and after chasing a couple all night we found ourselves no nearer than before, so just at daybreak a halt was decided upon and breakfast was eaten under an immense pine growing in a narrow glen between two rocky crags about a quarter of a mile or a little more in length and through which a little shallow stream trickled over a pebbly bottom.

We kept as quick as possible, for the tracks of different animals in the sandy banks of the stream showed that it was a frequent resort of wild beasts, and sure enough before the meal was finished we felt the ground begin to tremble under the tread of an approaching band of some large animals. Quick as thought we had dispersed and taken up stations about two hundred yards apart in the underbrush, which was dense enough to conceal us completely, and yet admit of us getting a good view of the game.

We had scarcely time to freely breathe before the lower growth of trees closing the entrance of the little vale parted and the form of a huge elk appeared, advancing proudly toward the stream we had just left. A noble looking creature, than the elk found on the Pacific coast, with his stately antlers, such as the hunters of the eastern states have no conception of, and his dainty tread and sensitive nostrils, cannot well be imagined. The fine fellow I have spoken of advanced cautiously, sniffing the air with the excitement of suspicion, but he had already sensed our most distant outpost, so, apparently thinking return equally hazardous, he brushed forward and was followed the next moment by a herd—one, two, six, ten—it was impossible to count them.

But before our rifles could be brought to the shoulder a new actor appeared on the scene. A white wolf, quite six feet in length, and the largest that I have ever seen, came bounding from the belt of small timber already spoken of, howling frightfully, and sprang on a fawn drinking near its mother, which screamed loudly as the wolf bore it to the ground. This seemed to be the signal for the rest of the band to appear, and they came yelping down the glen in pairs and threes, their bloodshot eyes and gaping mouths, with smoking, lolling tongues, proclaiming that they were hungry. Inspired by the same feeling of curiosity to see what would come of the wolves during the attack every man forbore to interfere and quietly watched the combat that ensued.

For the elk, which had at first scarcely seemed to comprehend the intentions of the wolves, soon collected themselves, and, tossing their great heads, began to paw the earth with their fore feet, making the air resound with their wild and furious bellowing. They formed a circle about the wolf that had crowded around the body of the prostrate fawn, and presented to them a formidable rampart of bristling heads. This circle now moved and narrowed until it completely inclosed the wolves, that now began to realize their danger, for they left their prey, plunging forward at a deer with snapping jaws and snarling in a frightful manner that revealed their sharp, gleaming teeth. But their ferocious onslaught was received on the lowered antlers, that in turn struck at them and sent them howling back for a few moments, but only to return again to the attempt to break through the bristling wall of their antagonists. This performance was repeated again and again, the elk closing together nearer and nearer at each repetition, until they finally assumed the offensive altogether and began to attack the wolves with hoof and horn. For a few minutes the scene was one of assembling pandemonium. The plunging and leaping of the maddened trapped wolves and the steady rising and striking of the bodies of the deer, with howls of pain intermingled with the shrieks of rage and fearful snarling, made it an occasion never to be forgotten by any who were present. As one of the wolves, making a desperate dash for liberty, broke at last from the circle and fled down the valley, Mr. T., who was my next neighbor, the brush, sent a shot after him, but it was apparently without effect, and was likewise wholly unnoticed by the elk.

In half an hour the combat was ended, and the fury of the elk being appeased—as it might well have been, for they had killed the last one of the wolves—they withdrew so that we could see the torn and bleeding bodies of the wolves that lay scattered about the dead fawn. The deer began now to betray their old uneasiness at our hidden presence, and we, judging it was time to have some sport in our own behalf, sent a volley of shot into them. Three of the beautiful, stately creatures fell plunging to the ground in the death agony.—Helena (Mont.) Enterprise.

Some Facts About "Retics."

Charley Howard was talking to Burke, the old book store man, a few evenings ago, when a stranger fresh from New Orleans slipped up, saying to Mr. Burke: "What will you give for a big lock of Jefferson Davis hair?"

"A lot of money for it," answered Mr. Burke. "Quite a quantity."

Then as the stranger walked away surprised that any one should have the treasure he thought so valuable, Mr. Burke said:

"The truth is I have everything a relic hunter wants. I have hair from the head of many distinguished men dead or alive. Maybe you wouldn't believe it, but one-quarter the money I put into my house came from the sale of hair of George Washington's head."

"Do you know," Mr. Burke went on, "that the relic hunter the biggest fool on earth. Any relic he may want has no value. It is simply a question of how much he is able to pay. He can always size a man up as he comes in and can therefore able to hit him just right."

"Take a battle-axe," said Mr. Burke after a pause. "I go home, say, and get my wife to mark a half dozen pieces of ribbon as I want it. Then I pound two bullets together and fasten to the ribbon. They are bullets, you know, which lie in mid air on the Kenesaw field. I put one in the showcase with the card and the other in a drawer. A relic hunter buys the only one, but as soon as he is gone the drawer is opened and another takes its place. They cost about a dime and bring in a five."—Atlanta Constitution.

The plunging and leaping of the maddened trapped wolves and the steady rising and striking of the bodies of the deer, with howls of pain intermingled with the shrieks of rage and fearful snarling, made it an occasion never to be forgotten by any who were present. At last the wolves, after a desperate dash for liberty, broke at last from the circle and fled down the valley. Mr. T., who was my next neighbor in the brush, sent a shot after him, but it was apparently without effect, and was the wonder of the 19th century. jac-dit
